Steve Kivler to Lead New Remodeling Division

Customers can prevent problems, save money by including electrical, plumbing and climate control in initial design

STANTON, Del. —Joseph Frederick & Sons is launching its new bath and kitchen remodeling department under the leadership of Steve Kivler.

Kivler, an expert in both design and construction, joins Joseph Frederick & Sons with more than 20 years of experience in the residential remodeling construction industry. For the past 10 years, Kivler owned and operated Quality Custom Carpentry, a Delaware home remodeling business.

Homeowners who include plumbing, electrical, and heating/cooling expertise in the initial phases of remodeling can avert design flaws that might not otherwise appear until later in the project, said Brian Frederick, president of Joseph Frederick & Sons.

“A design might look great on paper, but if plumbing and electricity and climate control aren’t considered in the plan, homeowners can end up with air flow problems or inefficient wiring and piping,” Frederick said. “To fix it when you’re half way through a job is expensive, but to live with the design problems will drive up your utility bills.”

As part of its new offering, Joseph Frederick & Sons also provides a full selection of cabinetry, countertops, flooring and fixtures.

“We want our customers to be able to make one call to one company and get the whole project done and done right,” Frederick said.

Founded in 1947, Joseph Frederick & Sons is a third-generation, family business providing the best in residential and commercial plumbing, electrical, and heating and air conditioning systems and service. The company’s electricians and plumbers are licensed and registered and known for their quality work. Joseph Frederick & Sons has designed and installed hundreds of residential and commercial systems and provides maintenance and service for many more.

One call, one company. A family business you can trust.
